TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Missouri was admitted to the Union as the twenty-fourth state in 1821. At that time its northern, eastern, and southern boundaries, and its western boundary as far north as the Missouri River, were established as at present; and in 1837 the Platte Purchase, now constituting the northwestern part of the state, was added. The area included within the present limits of Missouri formed a part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803, of the district of Louisiana in 1804, of the territory of Louisiana from 1805 to 1812, and of the territory of Missouri from 1812 to 1821. From 1812 until the creation of Arkansas territory, in 1819, Missouri territory comprised practically all the western watershed of the Mississippi north of the northern boundary of Louisiana. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, the population of Missouri is 3,404,055, which represents an increase of 110,720, or 3.4 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of Missouri from 1810 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole. Although the area of Missouri territory in 1820 was much greater than that of the present state, the figures given for 1810 and 1820 relate to substantially the present area.

Counties.—Missouri is divided into 114 counties and the independent city of St. Louis. The city and 25 of the counties show increases in population since 1910, while decreases appear for the remaining 89 counties. (See Table 1.) No changes in county boundaries have been made since 1910.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 68,727 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 49.5 (see Table 1), as against 47.9 in 1910 and 45.2 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed

POPULATION—MISSOURI.

“minor civil divisions.” The primary divisions of the Missouri counties are the townships, which number 1,297. The secondary divisions, of which there are 711, comprise 323 cities (not including the independent city of St. Louis), 83 towns, and 305 villages. Each of 5 cities is coextensive with the township in which located, and each of 17 cities, 2 towns, and 4 villages comprises parts of 2 or more townships. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—Missouri has 324 cities, of which St. Louis, with a population of 772,897, is the largest, and Kansas City, with 324,410, is second in size. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 25,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Missouri living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 36.3 per cent in 1900 to 42.5 per cent in 1910 and to 46.6 per cent in 1920.
